Soft Music.

"A friend of Ben" writes to us that while he knows that the Senator has said and done some indiscreet things, he thinks it would be better not to say any more on the subject, that the Union party wants to get as many votes as possible, and its friends ought not to do what may drive away some of those who are not wholly friendly to the administration." We do not propose to make any lengthy comment upon the "friend's" suggestions; we have no doubt that any reference to the "indiscreet things" is very unpleasant and unprofitable to the Senator, but he should have been wiser than to provoke just criticism or complaint by remarks which he could not but know would be sure to displease those who elected him, and he cannot blame loyal men, or loyal papers for expressing their decided opposition to his course in the matters in controversy. As to keeping silent upon important subjects, lest somebody may be driven away from the Union party, we are not so inclined. We wish the Union party to be as large as possible, and will do everything in our power, consistent with truth to make it so. But we do not believe anything is gained by fraud or concealment of purpose, and we know that there is danger that the Union party may be weakened by surrendering, or seeming to surrender, principle for the sake of policy, and by ignoring some of the great issues at stake in this national conflict, through fear that some democrats will not be willing to support the administration in all its measures. We will cheerfully waive all things that are not essential, but as to those which are so, and upon which the progress and success of the war depends, there must be cordial and distinctly expressed unity. That must exist, or the party is nothing but a sham—a mere frame work by which politicians with doubtful principles expect to climb into office. In that sort of organization true Union men can have no interest, nor will they be willing, merely for the sake of votes, to deny their principles, or so to shave them down as to make them idle words, signifying nothing but a desire for the triumph of one set of politicians over another. This is not in our judgment, the real object of the Union party, nor is it such a purpose as ought to claim the zealous support of patriots, who care for the cause of the country more than for the success of persons or of parties.

The people, who do the voting, and are inclined to vote for men who are guided by principles as well as by policy, are becoming satiated with that kind of politics which is always trimming its sails to the popular breeze. The times demand higher and more expansive aims. The prophecies of smooth things—the sound of self music—the sacrifice of what is manly, truthful and heroic for the sake of pleasing super sensitive pretenders, or to gain some personal or local end—all these are out of place in this day of national trial, and nothing but fidelity, unswerving and unbending, will satisfy the loyal masses. They will not at this time listen to soft music—they will not sacrifice one word or letter of the severe demands made upon this nation by eternal justice and inflexible truth, and they will treat with deserved scorn and contempt the petty demagogues who think they can as of old lead and deceive them by party names.

PROGRESS OF POLITICS.—Schiller observes as he goes along that the loyalty is a growing herb. There [illegible] Some old Breckinridgers, who 18 months ago [illegible] like the Presidential small-pox, [illegible]—are now intensely and even insolently loyal. A self-adjusting politician is the type of a man for the times.—Appeal.

We have some of the same sort up here, who are so vehemently rabid in their loyalty that they demand all the offices in the gift of the Union party and are inclined to abuse all the old Republicans, who presume to think they are rather too greedy for new beginners.

RECESSION.—The waters of the Willamette after attaining the past week the highest marks of the season, is again receding having fallen about one foot before dark last night.

General Butler

As every prominent man has his biographer of course we have a book in regard to Ben Butler. It chiefly relates to his military management in New Orleans, and fully vindicates the action which has been so liberally denounced by rebel sympathizers. No officer has been more abundantly abused, and perhaps this may be in part owing to the fact that the South counted on his aid in its treason, for previous to the attack on Sumter, its leaders invited and urged him to go with them, assuring him that he would be cordially welcomed and honored in the rebel States. He spurned the offer, and has been rewarded by such abuse as is highly honorable to a patriotic soldier. Mr Parton, the author of the book mentioned gives this sketch of the character of Butler, whom Major Winthrop while in service under him, called the "Grand Yankee."

It may be profitable to inquire what is the secret of Gen Butler's success. Brains. That is a great part of the secret. This man has understood the matter. He has been able to grasp the situation at all times and to know what the situation required at all times. From the hour when he shook hands with Jefferson Davis, in December 1860, [illegible] he has never been groping in the dark or feeling his way to a policy. And his opinion, generally scouted at the moment, has always been justified by the progress of events. He was right in getting Massachusetts ready to march. He took the right road to Washington. He was right in regarding Fortress Monroe as the base against Richmond. The flash of inspiration which pronounced the negroes contraband of war was right. Each step in the progress of his mind upon the negro question was right at the time and in the circumstances. That single suggestion of a board to decide upon the fitness of officers was worth a [illegible]. He has received from the Government. His order making officers pay for the pillage committed by their men, was another masterly stroke. Let every [illegible], perhaps, it would be to make the whole regiment responsible—privates as well as officers. At New Orleans he was magnificently right, both in theory and in practice. Every day brought forth some new proof of the fertility of his mind—of his genius for governing. That policy of isolating, crippling and destroying the malignants and of raising to the scale of being the laboring multitude, white, black or yellow, is the only policy which can ever make the country a nation, homogeneous, united, powerful and free. No man has, no man can point out another path to permanent reconstruction. To dethrone the false king, Minority, and to crown in his stead the true king, Majority—that was the scheme attempted in Louisiana. But one thing is wanting to its complete success—the total abolition of slavery, which constitutes the power of the ruling faction and keeps in heathenish bondage every poor man in South, whatever his color.

General Butler, on the other hand is no dreamer or theorizer. Dreamers or theorizers are good and helpful, but he is not one of them. His gift is to devise expedients to meet a new state of things or to effect an extra special purpose. He is singularly happy in framing a measure on the spur of the moment, which precisely answers the end proposed, and works good in many directions not especially contemplated. His plan for feeding the poor of New Orleans, for example, besides effecting the main purpose of saving thousands from starvation, brought home to the authors of their ruin a part of the ill consequences of their conduct, and chimed in with his general policy of suppressing one class and raising another.

Brains are the great secret. He is endowed with a large, healthy, active, instructed, experienced brain—Heaven's best gift, and the medium through which all other good gifts are given.

Courage will, firmness, nerve—call it by what ever name you choose—General Butler has it. He has not been called to face the leaden rain and iron hail of battle, but he has exhibited on every occasion the courage which the occasion required. He has shown a singular insensibility to the phantoms which play so important a part in war. He has shown the courage to go forward and meet the imaginary danger as well as the real. He has the courage of opinion—so rare in a republic where all public men want the favor of the many. He dares accept the remote consequences of a policy. He dares to take the responsibility. He dares to [illegible] obloquy. He dares to tell the truth and all the truth. I venture to declare that in the many thousand pages of his writings as an officer of the Government there is not one intentional misstatement or unfair suppression. Falsehood is the natural resort of timidity. A brave man does not lie, and need not.

Honesty. With opportunities of irregular gain such as no other man has had since the days of Warren Hastings his hands are spotless. He could have made a safe half million by a wink, and if he had done so he would have come home with a peculiar and marked reputation for integrity, because then he would have had an interest to create such a reputation and could not have indulged the noble carelessness with regard to his good name which is the privilege of a man strong in conscious rectitude. The fact that so able a man is accused of corruption is of itself a kind of proof of his honesty.

Humor. Thy happy word is part of the [illegible] of governing. There is apt to be a fund of humor in good victorious men, which enables them to get the laugh of mankind on their side. Would Palmerston ever have been Premier of England without his jokes, or Lincoln President of the United States unless he had first overspread acres of prairie mass meetings with a grin? The point, humor, and vivacity of General Butler's utterances have been an element of his success in the service of his country.

Faith. "After our return to the North," says one of the General's staff, "an ex Mayor of Chicago was introduced to the General at the St Nicholas Hotel in New York. It was just at a time when our cause looked very gloomy. The Mayor was evidently much depressed by the indications of National misfortune and in a tone of great despondency asked the General:

"'Do you believe we shall ever get through this war successfully?'

"'Yes, sir,' the General answered, very decidedly.

"'Well, but how,' asked the Mayor.

"'God knows, I don't, but I know He does, so I am satisfied,' the General replied. I have often heard him reply thus to anxious questioners.

"'We ought to march through,' he once said, 'but we shan't, I'm afraid we shall only tumble through. No matter, we shall get through somehow.'"

Humanity. The papers relating to our General's military career teem with evidence that he is a kind considerate man. He governed his soldiers strictly but always so as to promote their best interests. He was lenient and forgiving toward offenses of inadvertence, or such as betrayed only a weakness or infirmity of nature. He was gentle to the poor. He was solicitous to bestow honor where it was due. He was ingenious in devising ways of procuring promotion to deserving officers. He sympathized with the anxiety of parents for their sons in the army, and assuaged many a bleeding heart by the kind thoughtfulness with which all news was broken to them.

[illegible] and he begged that I [illegible] the next day when he [illegible] the better. The next morning [illegible] at breakfast in the open air [illegible] in a camp chair at a [illegible] had been improved [illegible]. In the evening, though still [illegible] through the encampments of [illegible] which he had to [illegible].

[illegible] this entire want of [illegible] You may recollect [illegible] certain Brigadier who [illegible] than a [illegible] enemy. [illegible] of the Department [illegible].

THE QUESTION OF LIFE.—Raymond discusses, in Harper's Magazine for November, the [illegible] of the negro slave and repeats what all slaveholders say, that the most religious slave will sometimes steal from his master. Some years ago, we remember an Alabama slaveholder dwelling upon this as a sign that the negro has not the same moral constitution with the white man. "For instance," said this worthy himself a minister of the gospel, "Town's Methodist preacher—an excellent man, good and constant at prayer, and valuable in every way but I've caught him in my corn crib a dozen times, and have been obliged to flog him for it." Raymond's story shows that the slave has his own theory about this matter, which differs from the master's, but may not be so much amiss after all.

THE WAY GERMAN MECHANICS WORK AND LIVE.—There are two brothers, Germans, manufacturers of cutlery, one of whom superintends the manufacturing operations in Solingen (Prussia) and the other sells articles at his warehouse No. 13 Cliff street in this city. From the latter—William Kind Esq., we have received the following account of the mode in which the manufacture of cutlery in Germany is conducted. It gives us a striking view of German life, showing not only industrial organization, but special habits and arrangements, some curious contrasts to those which prevail in this country.

Solingen is a town of some 7000 inhabitants, and the mechanics who make Mr. Kind's knives and scissors live in villages scattered round the town at a distance of from two to four miles. The Germans all live in villages, they are so social that they could not bear to live alone in scattered houses, as the Americans do. From one of these villages a blacksmith sends his wife to Mr Kind's establishment in Solingen for a quantity of iron and steel to be [illegible]. The material is weighed and delivered to the woman, who puts it on her head and carries it home. After the blacksmith has forged it all into scissors of sizes and forms according to directions, his wife puts them into a basket, [illegible] again on her head to the warehouse and receives the pay for the work. From some other village, a mechanic whose trade is grinding and polishing sends his wife to the town to procure a quantity of scissors to be ground and polished. After the return from the polishers, they go to a third village to receive the screws and rivets, and sometimes to a fourth to receive an extra polish. On the roads leading out from Solingen may be seen these stout German women, with loads straight as an arrow trudging along three or four miles, with their ponderous burdens on their heads. The iron, from the time it leaves the warehouse for the blacksmith's till the time that the scissors are finished, is carried on the top of women's heads an average distance of 12 miles.

This plan of operations for manufacturing differs somewhat from the course pursued in England and the United States. Here a large building is erected in which all the workmen are collected together, all convenient tools and engines are provided, the scissors are forged by one man and passed directly to another, who hardens and tempers them, another does the grinding, another the polishing and another the rivetting, thus great division of labor is secured, and all distant transportation of the material during process of manufacturing is avoided, all the heavy work (such as driving trip hammers and turning grind stones, being done by steam or water power. The result is that a given number of mechanics will make several times as many scissors in America as the same number will in Germany. When the scissors are sent into the market of the world, those made by the Germans will bring no more than those made by the Americans being worth no more. As the American produces several times as many in the course of the year as the German does, the American realizes several times as much for his year's labor as the German does for his. This matter is so plain that it is astonishing that there are people yet who cannot understand the tendency of labor saving or rather, labor doing machinery, is to raise the wages of labor. The German mechanics engaged in the manufacture of which we have been speaking are paid by the dozen, and earn from 25 to 40 cents per day.

Another feature in the case from which the American might extract a profitable lesson is, that the German will derive more pleasure for his thirty cents than the American will for his dollar and a half or two dollars.

While the Americans in fierce rivalry are struggling to outshine one another in foolish display the Germans [illegible] in their mutual [illegible] their lives in [illegible] communion and social enjoyment.

FOR HONORS OF THE WAR.—Major Northrup of the Twenty third Kentucky Regiment (says a letter writer in a St Louis paper) has in his possession a letter found on the body of a rebel Lieutenant, killed on the 23d, at the sudden charge on Orchard Knob. He had, evidently just received it at the time the alarm was given, and had not yet had time to break the seal. And well for him that he died before perusing its contents as it was from his wife, and conveyed a story which, to a sensitive husband, must have led almost to suicide. She detailed her suffering around her, and how she had been reduced to the last extremity adding that for herself she would have starved but she could not see her children die, and that [illegible] she had bartered her virtue for money, informing him the name of the party and then she appealed to him to forgive her, for God's sake if possible, but if not, to take care of the children, and [illegible] her go to ruin.

CURRENT WIT.—A Universalist clergyman of Wisconsin, who has recently returned home from a term of service as chaplain to a regiment in the army of the Cumberland, spoke at a town meeting the other day and in the course of his remarks [illegible] upon the atrocious barbarities of the rebels. "My friends," he said, "I have always preached [illegible] against any such institution as hell or future punishment but my experience in the last few months has [illegible] my opinion somewhat. I believe there is a hell [illegible].

HOW A REPUBLICAN GENERAL LIVES.—A correspondent of the New Orleans Daily Times, writing from the vicinity of Santiago Bar, sends the following regarding General Nathaniel P Banks: In these days of stylish Generals, it is refreshing to read of one really Republican among them.

"Going ashore my first inquiry was for the headquarters of the Commanding General. A couple of wall tents, one of them without a fly, standing apart from the tents occupied by the troops were pointed out to me. They were about a dozen yards from the beach, pitched on a bare sand flat. On their left was a picket rope, to which some fifteen or twenty horses were tied, and in their front towards the bay, were the camp fires of the staff. Several staff officers were seated on the sand in the rear of one of the tents, and before the other a sentinel was walking his solitary beat. Thinking that there must be some mistake that the headquarters of the Department of the Gulf must present more canvas than the small tents before me I approached the sentinel and inquired for the headquarters of General Banks and received the reply that he did not know where they were located. He had not seen the General, I understood. 'But,' replied I, 'this was pointed out to me as his tent.' 'It may be,' replied he, 'there is a clerk [illegible] here to whom I am ordered to admit no one but—' giving the name of his staff officer. I don't know who it is.' At this moment a [illegible] appeared and informed me that the General was quite [illegible].

GOV FOOTE DENOUNCING JEFF DAVIS.—There is some satisfaction in knowing that the rebel chief does not sleep upon a bed of roses. His old antagonist is in the Richmond Congress, and improves the opportunity of his position to throw hot shot at the traitor in the following manner. The subject under discussion was the persistent determination of Davis to retain Bragg in command in Tennessee. After stating how often and how greatly this officer had blundered, [illegible]

The President was called upon [illegible] him is incompetent and even dangerous. When he came out of Kentucky, from what proved to have been only a [illegible] expedition and a perfect failure as a military affair, [illegible] his colleagues and [illegible] his removal. They waited upon the President; it would be out of order to say what occurred. But the result is known—Bragg was not removed. The army under Bragg has been most odious to both the army and people for more than a year, and the President might have known it. But he [illegible] the army and said there was no cause for the complaints. [illegible] the army, and I mingled with the men and [illegible] dressed nearly every brigade in it—not however upon Bragg because I would not for the world have [illegible] any discontent. But I [illegible] distrustful of him. One thing is certain, he has driven away one of his best Generals; he has driven away the skilled and gallant Polk; he has [illegible] Buckner to leave him; he has calumniated Breckinridge and [illegible] McCown. Everybody knows he is on bad terms with Hardee. He is so constituted that he cannot agree with any of his commanders. What is more, one of my colleagues has received a letter from Bragg himself in which he said—only two weeks ago—[illegible] command that army effectively unless he was clear of [illegible] unless there were cashiered twelve brigadier generals and a whole regiment of field officers. President Davis was appealed to by nearly every officer there for his removal. But he stood up for Bragg. He had committed himself to the country, he had expressed his opinion publicly of Bragg's eminent fitness for the command, and was determined to risk the safety of the country upon it. For the same reason, as I under the same circumstances, Pemberton was retained. That was the sole reason of the fall of Vicksburg. To show the pertinacity of the President the Military Court directed to inquire into the conduct of Pemberton was dispensed with, two days after it met by the order of the President. When this men had surrendered—dishonorably surrendered—his [illegible] to the enemy, the President [illegible] him his companion carried him with him to Bragg's army and, if the truth must be told, many a soldier as they rode along the line said "There goes the traitor who delivered us over at Vicksburg." Even then the President had the temerity and unblushing disregard of public sentiment in his own State and elsewhere to offer to that same Pemberton the command of Polk's corps, and if he had undertaken that duty, he would have been slain in the earliest hour of battle, or even before the battle by the hands of his own men. I will further add that upon the proposition of sending L[illegible] into East Tennessee, the President concurred with Bragg, and that the army was divided. Unfortunately numbers to the enemy, but [illegible] none in the world in valor. Bragg's army was left against an overwhelming foe in front. By this order the President did not leave more than 30,000 men under Bragg while the enemy numbered from 100,000 to 1[illegible],000. Before this force, the most valiant and experienced soldiers of any time or any land, in numbers like to ours, must have been overwhelmed. What now does the President say? Does he come forward boldly and generously and say, "I am responsible for the disaster?" No! He charges them with want of valor. I charge him not with want of valor, but with want of confidence in the opinions of others, with gross mismanagement, with contempt for the sentiment of the people of the country. I told him twelve months ago that unless Bragg was removed Tennessee would be in the hands of the enemy, and now my bleeding State attests the truth of my and the whole country's prediction. The President never visited the army without doing it injury—never yet, that it has not been followed by disaster. He was instrumental in the Gettysburg affair; he instructed Bragg at Murfreesboro, he has opened Georgia to 100,000 of the enemy's troops, and laid South Carolina liable to destruction. I charge him with having almost ruined the country, and will meet his champion anywhere to discuss it. Would to God he may never visit the army again; would to God he had yielded to the public sentiment of his country, would to God he had been able to appreciate the truth that when confidence is once lost by the people in an officer it is suicidal to retain him.

MARRYING UNDER DIFFICULTIES.—The editor of a Southern paper is responsible for the perpetration of the following.

Not long since a Confederate soldier returned from the war to his home, near the State line dividing Kentucky and Tennessee. The first business he attended to was that of marrying the girl he had left behind him when he first started out to seek the bubble reputation at the cannon's mouth. A large party was gotten up by the bride's family and a man who was conceded to be Justice of the Peace because he had held the office for twenty years before this cruel war had commenced, performed the ceremony that united two loving hearts that had but a single thought. After these rites had been observed there was a feast of hog and hominy, roast turkey, pumpkin pies etc. and several gallons of forty-rod whisky to be discussed. In the course of human events the newly wedded pair were put to bed according to the customs still in vogue among the rural population.

They had scarcely begun to realize the "situation" before there was a great rattling at their chamber door and an imperative demand for them to arise. Some prying people had just discovered that the magistrate was not a regularly elected officer, and was not a justice at all. Alarm took them all and another justice was sent for who lived some miles distant. Before midnight the knot was tied again, and the anxious pair suffered to retire for the second time. The first contretemps was discussed freely by those who had not gone home, and the various contingencies of the matter investigated thoroughly. All at once it was found out that the last justice lived in Kentucky while the ceremony had been performed just over the line in Tennessee. There was hurried rush up stairs, and another aroused of the bride and groom. They came down stairs somewhat dissatisfied with the turn matters had taken, and then the whole party went down the road three quarters of a mile till they got into the State where the squire lived, and there the wedding rites were performed for the third time. The bride's mother, not satisfied with all this, [illegible] errors, had some time before, despatched a swift messenger for a settled preacher, and when they got back to the paternal mansion to make all things safe, the knot was tied for the fourth time by the man of God. By this time the first glimpse of daylight was streaking the eastern sky.

Wearied out by the experiences and anxieties of the night they were at last suffered to retire in peace. Half an hour had not elapsed before there was another confusion in the house. A thundering knock at the chamber door of the young couple, made the groom thoroughly mad. He told whoever it was that it was too late, and swore he would not get up again for all the [illegible] in the world. He would whip the first man that disturbed him again, he didn't care who it was. A gruff demand to open the door, [illegible] he did not wish to have it beaten down, and the rattle of a musket decided him to submit once more to the importunity.

On opening the portal he was confronted by a Federal soldier, and the words, "You are my prisoner—come along with me."

Vainly did he plead to have the privilege of going [illegible] the appearance, and his offers of bribes were all useless on the idle wind. The officer charged with his arrest was inexorable, and [illegible] the [illegible] honeymoon at Columbus in the [illegible] house while the disconsolate [illegible] bride [illegible] at home.

ENGLISH MEN OF WAR SWAPPING GUNS FOR COTTON.—Wilkes' Spirit of the Times is informed by a Colonel attached to the Department of the Gulf, that an intelligent loyal citizen of the United States, who resided at Bagdad, a little town near the port of Brazos, Texas reported to him that in June last there was eighty five sail collected there, that eight of this number were British men of war, and that he has stood on the shore and seen these war vessels unload their broadside guns, and sending them ashore for transportation to the interior, receiving cotton in exchange that these operations were conducted on the part of the Confederates by the Captain who was in charge of the troops at Bagdad and when he inquired of the Captain why the cotton was shipped on board these public vessels, the answer was, that it was to go to England, to the good the Confederate indebtedness in the cotton loan.

THE NEW [illegible] LINE FROM SAN FRANCISCO [illegible].—With regard to the [illegible] line to the Atlantic States there is much diversity of opinion among telegraphers [illegible] as to its [illegible] point of view, the present line being as they assert, scarcely able in some of its monopoly of business to pay a satisfying dividend to its stockholders. But as the [illegible] at the bottom of the new enterprise, and as moreover its projector O. J. Smith is not in the habit of backing out of an object he has once fairly started [illegible] case where he has a [illegible] to gratify the question of the eventual existence of two telegraph lines to the Pacific may be considered as decided in the affirmative.—*Cor. WE THINK THERE IS no Medicine so efficacious in removing humors from the blood as SCOVILL'S BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP. It is recommended by Physicians in all parts of the country, for the cure of Scrofula, etc. Pimples or sores indicate that the system is out of order. Unless something is done to cleanse the blood of these impurities the result may be in a more serious disease, such as Scrofula, Syphilitic, etc. Those who wish to find a most efficacious remedy, and yet have no confidence in Patent Medicines generally, will never regret a trial of Scovill's Blood and Liver Syrup.

FAIR PLAY.—This new little steamer, under command of Capt. Thayer, left this city Saturday morning for a trip to the Cowlitz, having on board Mr. John Nation of the Oregon Iron works, to superintend the working of her machinery, which has been made by him at the above establishment, and which produced some new and decided improvements in that department of steamers. The boat ascended the Cowlitz river about ten miles, on Sunday morning, and then returned to this city, arriving at her wharf here at 7 P. M. Every part of the whole proved competent, and she made ten miles an hour, under 90 pounds of steam, against the current of the Columbia on her return. She is a fine little boat, and we understand will receive her haul of paint, before entering upon the trade for which she was projected.

A RESPECTABLE "CABBAGE HEAD."—Every community can boast more or less "cabbage heads," varying in dimensions from a genuine "goose neck" to a respectable pumpkin. But Oregon vegetation has developed among agricultural products, articles in that line which her Agricultural Fairs may justly be proud. There is one to be seen at a vegetable stall on First street, which measures six inches in circumference, after being divested of every leaf to the bare poll. It would make a very fair sized dish of "cold-slaugh."

RUMOR AT VANCOUVER.—We are told that on Sunday last a rumor got afloat at Vancouver to the effect that the city of Charleston had been destroyed by fire for a distance of six miles, through Gen. Gilmore's incendiary doctrines, and that grand salutes were being fired in this city in consequence. Considerable disappointment was manifested when it was ascertained that the rumor was without foundation in fact.

COLUMBIA RIVER.—The Hunt brought down about thirty passengers last evening, but no mail through the express. No connection was made above the Dalles. The Columbia is reported open to Umatilla, and by to-morrow we expect steamers will be able to reach Wallula, so that navigation may now be considered fully open.

WATER PIPES BURST.—During the late cold weather the Portland Water Company lost some sixty lengths of the 6-inch iron pipe which they had laid to connect Balch's Creek with the present reservoir. They had turned the water through what they had laid as an experiment, and before it had all been freed, the cold snap came on, freezing the water and bursting the pipes. The Company are now engaged in replacing the defaulting lengths.

THE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.—A small number of subscribers to the Merchantile Library had met at the United States District Court room last evening to act on the report of the committee on organization, which was adopted. The plan recommended is to elect ten trustees for life, to control and manage the institution, and in case of their removal or death, the Supreme Court Judges to fill the vacancies. We can conceive how soon a Society started in this way would lose its interest, either through the neglect of its trustees or dissatisfaction of its members with the course pursued, there being no remedy in the hands of the Society for any departure from the proper management on the part of the trustees. Why the experience of Library Associations throughout the United States should not be a fitting guide for this Association is not evident. We think it would be preferable to start upon a basis where, in case those elected as directors should not prove capable to fill their position, the Society could remedy it. With the fund already subscribed a good Library can purchased as a nucleus, and then its permanency would depend on the subscribing members, but if they cannot have a voice in its management, their interest would soon flag, and the character of the Library be left to depend on the personal views or religious inclinations of its trustees. The meeting adjourned to meet at the call of a committee who were to recommend the names of trustees at which time it is to be hoped all interested will attend and endeavor to start the Society in a manner that shall insure its permanency.

TO BE DISMANTLED.—The hull of the steamer E. D. Baker was towed to Oregon City on Sunday, by the Senator, and her upper works will soon become part and parcel of a new steamer building by the People's Transportation Company at Canemah, which is said to be the finest boat ever on the upper river.

FOR PORTLAND.—The bark Julia Cobb, Capt. Staples, which recently made the voyage direct from New York to this port with a full cargo, and took in piles and lumber here for California, sailed from San Francisco for this port again on the 16th inst.

A fine team of four horses were yesterday turned out in a new set of harness, at one of our principal establishments, intended for the express line between Umatilla and Lewiston. The horses are very large, and just suited for mountain travel.

FREIGHT PER PACIFIC.—This steamer took away some 6,000 boxes of apples, besides two horses and a small amount of other freight for San Francisco, on Saturday.

GOLD EXPORT PER PACIFIC.—Messrs. Allen & Lewis, agents, shipped $15,000 on the Pacific, in addition to the amount reported by Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express.

THE OREGON CITY TRADE.—The People's Transportation Company now average fair freights to Oregon City, and their now boat ...

PROGRESS OF GRADING THE PLAZA.—The work of grading the Public Square by the State prisoners, nineteen of whom are constantly employed thereon, is progressing at such rate as to render it probable that in a few weeks the general appearance of the entire locality will be improved. We have always favored the prosecution first of the more important public improvements, but, disposed to make a commendatory note of progress in any quarter, we rejoice that something is being done tending to beautify and adorn that locality. We hope it will look so well that the authorities may be induced to make it accessible from the front of the city.

A FAWN.—In the neighborhood of the Public School in this city, may be seen, almost any day, a young deer, for which a strong attachment has grown in the hearts of the young scholars. We noticed them in their plays together yesterday, and it afforded us considerable amusement, as well as strengthening the opinion that the brute creation have powers to reciprocate our feelings.

THE EMPRESS EUGENIE AND HER SCHEMES.—A writer in a late number of Harper's Magazine says of the Empress of the French:

She was and is a determined and energetic ally of the Pope, and for him she plotted and worked with an energy worthy of any cause. She sent him vast sums of money, obtained from irregular sources; she collected from her adherents and surrounders all they could give her; caused contributions to be exacted from even the servants in the imperial household, and at last, when she had exhausted all her means, she pledged to the old duke of Brunswick—a monomaniac upon the subject of possessing diamonds—the jewels which the great cities of France—Paris, Lyons, Marseilles, Bordeaux, Strasburg and ... presented to her on the occasion of her marriage with Napoleon. These jewels were, strictly speaking, crown property, but in her overzeal and religious enthusiasm, largely spiced with a spirit of opposition to her husband's wishes, she sold these jewels and sent the sums obtained to Pius IX.

Her old antagonist, M. Fould, has been recalled to office by the Emperor, who is aware of his great worth, and, as Minister of Finance, Fould is once more in direct opposition to the wild extravagance of Eugenie. He pleads and menaces, but prayers and ... are alike ineffectual. The palace of the Elysees, which their Majesties are to occupy next year, has just been renovated. The apartments destined for the Empress were magnificent. She found them insufficiently so, and has caused changes and ordered additional decorations, which will cost millions upon millions.

* * * The change of character which is so noticeable in Eugenie is not the only one noticeable in her Majesty. Though but 36 years of age, her beauty is sadly on the wane. Her cheeks are now pendant, her hair thin and falling, while the nose—formerly so well shaped, so precisely adapted to her style of feature—seems far too prominent. This effect is no doubt produced by the falling of the cheeks. Then her Majesty has resorted to what the French term "maquillage"—that is, painting cheeks, eyebrows lashes and lips. Her make-up is scientific, but plainly to be detected; and the persons who see the Empress now for the first time exclaim, "Why, she is not nearly so handsome as she had been represented!" She is not handsome now. Her brow has lost its bright, amiable look; the cares of her newly assumed position have wrinkled its once smooth surface; besides, she is a Spanish woman, and they very soon fade. She has become capricious and overbearing—jealous she has ever been since her marriage, and with good cause. Her present extravagance is unpardonable; in fact, the woman is totally transformed. The query now is, was she really all she seemed, or was it policy?—were her amiability and sweetness of deportment but assumed as occasion required?

Should Napoleon be suddenly deprived of life, and Eugenie be thus made Regente, the world will witness strange deeds. It will see the Pope controlling the empire of France, With such an eventuality possible a great interest centres in Eugenie—the no longer amiable kind, good and charitable Empress; but the madly extravagant, bigoted, superstitious tool of the wily Jesuits.

A Call to Woman.

I read the call from the Eastern land,
On the bright first day in June,
Days after that noble band had met,
But it found my heart in tune.

I heard the call from the Eastern land,
Two oceans our homes divide;
But this I know, in feeling and thought
Our hearts are closely allied.

And I heard the call as forth it went,
O'er the distant hills of Maine;
On to the West, 'till it reached the land
Where falls no summer rain.

Then I saw afar the darkened homes,
Where no coming bloom of May
Can ever restore the old glad light
That has faded now away.

Then far beyond, by Potomac's side,
I saw the glimmering tents;
I saw the best in battle array,
There standing for our defense.

And I pledged anew my love and faith,
To the cause of Truth and Right;
I answered the call that summer day,
Ere I saw its waning light.

O woman, in all our Western land,
You, too, will answer the call;
You will aid the soldier boy, I know,
Who went from your father's hall?

"We will!" each loyal woman replied;
The words we repeated o'er;
And thus we answer the Eastern call,
From the far Pacific shore.

BUTTE COUNTY, CAL., 1863. E.

TRICKS OF NECROMANCY.—The Chicago Journal lets the public into the secrets of the "Wizards." A conjurer's implements were lately seized in Chicago, and hence this exposure:

In the hurry of departure he unluckily left at the depot a couple of large boxes, which the creditors of his wizardship immediately pounced upon, and which were found to contain the implements of his trade. Still more unlucky for professors of diablerie, these articles reveal the modus operandi of their business—showing how it is done—and how it isn't. We beg pardon of all "wizards" for letting the public into their secrets, but as we are not sworn to privacy, we cannot be reproached for violation of confidence, and moreover as the knowledge gained, is of such stupendous consequence, we deem it a duty to give it for the "cause of public enlightenment."

The most cumbrous article of this "stock in trade," is a large copper kettle, in which Dr. Faustus and the Devil were wont to boil their dinners. This kettle is suspended before the audience, and into it are thrown several pailsfull of water, which is suddenly converted into solid ice, or mysteriously metamorphosed into half a dozen pigeons, rabbits, &c., &c., which on removing the cover, hurry away in every direction. All this is the silliest piece of humbugging in the world to such as can perceive that this mysterious kettle is made with double sides, with a vacancy between them into which the water passes, and thence is drawn upward through the pail and suspending rods, which are hollow, and passes off in a manner of a syphon to a tub below the stage. The cover is sufficiently large to contain the birds and rabbits, which, by turning the knob of the cover, are let down, together with the separatrix that concealed them, into the kettle.

The celebrated "bottle feat"—of pouring a great variety of wines and liquors from a common glass bottle—is no less simple, and when understood, no less silly than the foregoing. The common glass bottle borrowed from the audience, is, of course, not the one used on these occasions, but it is exchanged for another made of japanned tin, and furnished internally with receptacles for the different kinds of liquors. Each receptacle has a valve, and these valves may be opened and closed at pleasure, by stops on the outside of the bottle, arranged for the fingers like the keys of a musical instrument. The compartment having no connection with the mouth of the bottle, except by the valves, the bottle may at any time be rinsed with water, and then more liquor poured out. There are a couple of those "inexhaustible bottles" in the "present collection," both of which are soon to be sold to the highest bidder. We advise parties going to California, or the lumber regions, to buy and take them along—they may thus carry a respectable retail liquor shop in each pocket.

The "Etherial Suspension" is another trick of the [illegible] which people, with large marvelousness, were staring with open mouths and elevated eye-brows, a short time ago. The strong iron machinery for suspending the body, in a horizontal position, is among the articles disclosed by the opening of these boxes.

A small piece of brass ordnance, calculated for the use of gold watches, canary birds, &c., for ammunition, is another of the interesting collection. There are also a great variety of other articles, numbering some fifty or sixty, designed for various uses in the black art.

ANOTHER WORD ABOUT DRESS.—He who labors for the physical redemption of woman in America must begin with her dress. The prevailing modes constitute an insuperable obstacle to her physical development. Every humane physiologist has argued, expostulated and implored. If American women should squeeze their feet until those members were in Chinese fashion, or should place a flat stone on the head until the brains were forced into the back of the neck, we might keep silent; but while they compress that part of the body which contains the organs of vitality—the heart, lungs, liver and stomach—we must continue to resist their madness. In this part of the body is the fountain of life. The slightest [illegible] immediately reduces the size and activity of that fountain. He who has studied thoughtfully the inevitable results of the prevailing style of dress at the waist, will affect no surprise at those cold feet, that constipation, weak spine, short breath, palpitation of the heart and congestive headache, which are the average characteristics of the health of American women. Give a live woman a corset, the average tight dress, and the physiologist will deduce the morbid conditions I have named.

Near my institution in Boston, there are three shops: a rum shop, a candy shop, and a corset shop. I do not know which is the greatest evil.

My practical suggestion is that without corsets, the dress-waist should be full and loose; the skirt-bands buttoned about the waist much larger than the body, supported on the shoulders by suspenders, such as gentlemen wear, and attached to the bands at the same points. My own wife adopted many years ago the style I advise, and is greatly delighted with the results. The dress is more artistic and beautiful than the plain waist with the hard, ironlike ligature at the band. After twenty years study of the subject of health, and the causes of disease, if I were permitted to select from our one hundred and one physiological blunders that one which I should most desire to see corrected, I should unhesitatingly name this feature of female dress.—Dr. Lewis.

"Daddy," said a young hopeful, "let's go up in the nine-pin alley and roll." "Roll, what do you know about rolling?" "Me knows about it? Why, I can roll your darned eyes out in ten minutes!"

Hannah Moore said to Horace Walpole, "If I wanted to punish an enemy, it should be by fastening on him the trouble of constantly hating somebody."

ROMANTIC STORY.—Upwards of thirty years ago a marriage took place in the neighborhood of Liverpool, the man and the wife being in humble circumstances. After living together till after the birth of a child, the husband went to Australia to seek his fortune. His wife never heard from him after he left her, and supposing he was dead after the lapse of seven years she married a widower with three children. To this number, in her second married life, she added five—making her whole family, including the child of her first husband, nine in all. Sometime since the second husband died, and she was left to struggle with her large family. To her great surprise at the beginning of the present year her first husband made his appearance at Liverpool. During his thirty years' absence he had prospered in Australia, and was a large land proprietor there. He had heard of his wife's second marriage; but, as the fault was his, he never thought of returning to England until he had heard of the death of the second husband. To make amends for his former neglect of his wife—for, notwithstanding her second marriage, she was still his wife, he behaved in the most handsome manner to all her children, gave them costly outfits and has taken them and the wife of his early affections out with him to the land of his adoption. The wife, who has thus after an absence of more than thirty years, been restored to her position, is now about seventy years of age.

AN EYE TO THE FUTURE.—A friend, residing in Port Huron, Michigan, has a little son about nine years old. A neighbor of his had a lovely and interesting daughter of about the same age. These children have been playmates and fast friends for several years, and, as is frequently the case in like circumstances, have been often bantered on the childish attachment. Lately Uncle Sam E——, the father of the boy met little Jennie on the street.

"What profession do you want Alva to study for?" said he, with a merry twinkle in his eye, at the same time stroking affectionately the curls of the little maiden.

"Oh!" said she with a confused hesitation and an interesting lisp, "I don't know, Mr. E——, I shouldn't like to have him be a minithter, I gueth."

"And why don't you want him to be a minister, Jennie?" said the old gentleman, smiling.

"Oh, cawth," replied she, blushing and looking down with unaffected modesty, "minithers' children never have any fun."

A PRACTICAL JEST.—The only thing of the kind in which Mr. Barham was ever personally engaged, was as a boy at Canterbury, when, with a schoolfellow, now a gallant major, "famed for deeds of arms," he entered a Quakers' meeting house, looking around at the grave assembly, the latter held up a penny tart, and said solemnly: "Whoever speaks first shall have this pie." "Go thy way," commenced a drab colored gentleman, raising "Go thy way," and— "The pie is yours sir" exclaimed D——, placing it before the astonished speaker, and hastily effecting his escape.

Mr. Quilp, of the Boston Post, having spoken rather disparagingly of the female sex, in the hearing of a lady friend, was rebuked for his impertinence by the question, "What would be the effect upon, the men if all the 'little dears' should perish?" "Ah!" said Quilp, "I acknowledge that the result would be a universal stag-nation!"

It is a blessed thing for a poor man to have a contented wife; one who will not wish to live in a style beyond her husband's income just because her next door neighbor does; one who can be happy in the love of her husband, her home, and its beautiful duties, without asking the world for its smiles or its favor.

"There's two ways of doing it," said Pat to himself, as he stood musing and waiting for a job. "If I save two thousand dollars I must lay up a hundred dollars a year for twenty years, or I can put away ten dollars a year for two hundred years! Now which shall I do?"

An actor, who was extremely ugly, was playing a part in which a lady had to say to him—"Ah! sire, you change countenance." A wag in the pit cried out, "Let him do so, pray don't stop him."

A western paper says: "Never plead guilty to poverty. So far as this world is concerned, you had better admit that you are an infernal scoundrel."

"I wonder," says a woman of humor, "why my husband and I quarrel so often, for we agree uniformly on one grand point: he wishes to be master and so do I."

To The Public.

I WOULD HEREBY CALL THE ATTENTION of the public to the fact, that on the first of May, 1864, they will be called upon by the United States Assessors to make statement of Income for the year 1863, and as the year 1863 is just ended, it would be well for every one to make up their accounts for said year, while every thing is fresh in their memory, and be ready to make statement when called upon by the Assessor.

Under the ruling of the Commissioner of Internal revenue, persons can only deduct expenses for repairs, etc., from the amount received from the same property on which such expenditure have been made. For Instance—a person receives $500 for rents. He can use of that amount all that is necessary to repair such property, from which rents were derived; the same rule applies to steam-boats, sawmills, and other like property; but all monies derived from Interest on notes, Bonds, Mortgages, and from dividends, must be returned as Income, although a portion by the whole has been expended in repairing buildings, steamboats, etc.

If persons will prepare their accounts and statements showing Amounts received with the source from whence derived, amount expended, and for what purpose, then with the forms and blanks which will be furnished them by the Assessor, a correct return can be made.

AND

DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of DIGESTION and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATERY or CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as PAIN and INFLAMMATION, and is good for MEN, WOMEN OR CHILDREN.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

For Weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion or Abuse,

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,

Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the	Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,

	Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms if allowed to go, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

IN ONE OF WHICH THE PATIENT MAY EXPIRE.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION."

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS

THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS,

And the melancholy deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion that

THE CONSTITUTION,

once affected by Organic Weakness,

Requires the Aid of Medicine, to strengthen and invigorate the system, which invariably does.

A Trial will Convince the most Skeptical.

THOUSANDS UPON THOUSANDS

Who have been the victims of Quacks

and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in a more aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage.

AYER'S
Catharic Pills,

(SUGAR COATED,)

ARE MADE TO

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK

Invalids, Fathers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Effects, and judge of their Virtues.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

PITTSBURG, PA., May 1, 1856.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once. If they will cure others as they do me, the fact is worth knowing. Yours with great respect,

ED. W. PREBLE, Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, WASHINGTON, D. C., 7 Feb., 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours,

ALONZO BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.

POST OFFICE, HARTLAND, LIV. CO., MICH., Nov. 15, 1855.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and pining away for months. Went off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. She then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her, by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, while others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctors' bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here. GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, WYOMING CO., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1855.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA MORGRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, SAVANNAH, GA., Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, BATON ROUGE, LA., 5 Dec., 1855.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years.

VINCENT SLIDELL.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and as a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skillful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town, and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country on this continent without some personal experience of its effects; and fewer yet the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steals upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the Cherry Pectoral saves more lives by the consumptions it prevents than those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable, nor neglect them until no human skill can master the inexorable canker that, fastened on the vitals, eats your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and as they know too the virtues of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them it is still made the best it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce it the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who rely on it the best agent which our skill can furnish for their cure.
